Judgment for Plaintiff. The case of Eliza A. Smith vs. Franklin G. Taft, on the short calendar list, was heard. It was for damages. Mrs. Smith, who is now in Putnam, had been in the Central house in this city, has a claim of $568 for board for Mr. and Mrs. Franklin G. Taft and child and a maid a part of the summer of 1908. The $111.25 has been paid. In order to recover the amount Attorney Harvey stated to the court that garnish papers had been served on the Central house and that the garnish papers were returned to the court in Massachusetts on some property due Mrs. Taft.

Mrs. Smith, when put on the stand, testified to the amount of the bill and said that it had been running since October, 1907. No appearance was made for the defendant, and the court ordered judgment in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount of the bill and ordered a bond of $1200 to be furnished by the plaintiff to prosecute the matter in the probate court in Massachusetts, as is required by law.

On the motion for a bond to be filed by the plaintiff in the case of Emily J. Ross' appeal from commissioner's decision on the Sarah E. Way claim against the estate of William Ross, Attorney Harvey agreed to prosecute and Attorney Charles A. Capen, who appeared for Mrs. Way, argued against being obliged to file a bond. Decision was made in favor of the plaintiff.

Concerning the matter of issuing a permanent injunction in the case of Frank G. Lawton vs. the Central house, the proposed injunction was submitted to Judge Robinson by Attorney Sears, counsel for the plaintiff. The court stated that he would decide the motion Tuesday morning and ordered Attorney Perkins notified to be present at that time to offer any objection that he might have.

Court was adjourned until Tuesday morning at 10.15.
